1 killed, 22 missing in Gulf raid

BAHRAIN (AP) - A Norwegian captain was killed and 21 crewmen went missing when Iraqi warplanes twice raided an Iranian supertanker in the Gulf last week, the Norwegian Foreign Ministry reported Sunday. Gulf-based maritime salvage executives had reported that the crew of the 218,467-ton Susangird had suffered casualties, but could not give an exact figure because Iran clamped a news blackout on the incident. In Oslo, Bjoern Skogmo, the Norwegian Foreign Ministry's acting spokesman, said the tanker's master. Olaf, Lerocy, was killed and only five of the 26 other seamen aboard were rescued. Norway's national news agency, NTB, reported that Leroey was the only Norwegian on board. It said the other crewmen were from Poland and the Philippines. "We have our information about the dead and missing from the Norwegian embassy in Rivadh, Saudi Arabia. We feel we still need more information," NTB quoted Skogmo as saying.

30 Arabs shot and wounded or beaten up

OCCUPIED JERUSALEM (Agencies) — Palestinians intensified violent anti-occupation protests on Sunday for the fifth day running and Israeli soldiers shot and wounded or beat up at least 30 Arab demonstrators in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, reports from the occupied territories said.

The protests, which has British Broadcasting Corporascores of injuries since last Wednesday, was described by Israeli commentators as some of the worst since a wave of protests against Israel's expulsion of two West Bank mayors in 1980-1981.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat accused the Israeli cabinet of planning the current wave of violence which he said killed 23 Arabs and injured 210 others. In a radio interview with the

Israel covering up massacres

BAGHDAD (R) - A senior PLO official said on Sunday Israel was covering up the Palestinian casualty toll from five days of violent protests in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Bassam Abu Sherif, an adviser to PLO chief Yasser Arafat, said the PLO had asked the International Committee of the Red Cross to send representatives to investigate what he described as massacres by Israeli troops. He told Renters that he had names of 30 Palestinians wounded in violence on Sunday, but he was certain that the list was incomplete.

OIC condemns Israeli practices and appeals for U.N. intervention

By Najwa Najjar Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN - The secretarygeneral of the Organisation of Islamic Conference (OIC) on Sunday strongly condemned Israeli measures against Palestinians in the occupied territories and called on the international community to shoulder its responsibility to ensure that the rights of the Palestinian people to seek liberation are not trampled upon by the occupation forces.

"We salute the brave struggle of the Palestinian people against the occupation," said Sharifuddin Pirzada. "We also deeply grieve their losses and send our heartfelt condolences to them," he said in an interview with the Jordan Times. The OIC secretary general, who was in Amman for talks on preparations for a meeting of OIC foreign ministers to be held here in next March, was referring to the violent protests raging in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza. At least eight Palestinian protesters, including women and children, have been shot dead by Israeli soldiers since last Wednesday. A formal statement issued by the OIC headquarters in Jeddah on Sunday urged the United Nations to intervene to protect Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

It called on the United Nations and all "peace-loving forces to respond to their moral and legal responsibility towards the Palestinian people.

The statement, excerpts of which were carried by Reuter. condemned "the Zionist terrorist aggression against the people of Palestine in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, as well as in the Palestinian refugee camps in South Lebanon."

In his interview with the Jordan Times, Mr. Pirzada rejected Israeli contentions equating the Palestinian struggle with terror-ism and said: "We condemn terrorism but a national liberation struggle is different. Mr. Pirzada was received by His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan on Sunday. The foreign minister, Mr. Taher Al Masri, held talks with the OIC secretary-general on Saturday.

Mr. Pirzada, who left Amman later Sunday, also condemned Israel for rejecting international The OIC statement urged the efforts for settling the Palestinian

Accord eludes

VIENNA (Agencies) — OPEC struggled Sunday to settle the final details of an oil price and production pact. One oil minister said the group might have to rework its tentative accord.

The 13 oil ministers earlier said they planned to ratify the tentative agreement reached Saturday to retain an oil price of $18 a barrel.

But Sunday evening, the Gabon minister said the OPEC leadership had become worried that the international oil market would not consider the prospective accord credible.

Analysts had said after hearing of the tentative deal that it would lead to an immediate decline in world oil prices by as much as $2 a barrel.

Etienne Guy Tchioba of Gabon said the deal was virtually set Saturday when a debate broke out over how long the accord should last. Some wanted the $18 price to be kept through 1988; others wanted to review it during the vear, he said.

Then, according to Mr. Tchioba, some ministers, whom he did not identify, raised concerns that the deal would not result in a lower production level.

"We realised that the ceiling production level) was not credible for the market," he said.

Mr. Tchioba said it was unclear how the meeting would proceed, but that it was almost certain the ministers would have to meet again Monday. Earlier, OPEC President Rilwanu Lukman said he did not know when all 13 ministers would be ready to hold a full meeting.

Ousted president warns Aden of violent backlash over death sentences

SANAA (Agencies) — The ousted South Yemeni president, Ali Nasser Mohammad, warned on Sunday of a violent backlash after an Aden court passed death sentences on him and 34 former top aides.

"We are sure the reaction of our friends (in South Yemen) will be violent," he told reporters in the North Yemeni capital of Sunaa. But he said he did not want war to engulf the two states.

The court in Aden, capital of South Yemen, announced the sentences on Saturday after a year-long trial of 108 people, 44 in their absence, on treason

"It is a catastrophe for the Yemeni people, said Mr. Nasser Mohammad, who fled to the north after he was overthrown in bloody street fighting in January. 1986. "The people are against these crimes.

He said efforts were being made to secure the detainees' release and win a stay of execution. He believed North Yemen's President Ali Abdullah Saleh would ask the Soviet Union to persuade South Yemen to reconsider the verdicts.

But he was pessimistic over prospects for success. "There are too many centres of power and no single leader to make the decision," he said.

sentenced to death. Countries with high-level links with Aden, including the Soviet Union, have a particularly impor-

"Some of them (the accused) were involved in acts of violence ... some of those sitting in judgement were involved too. That makes it political," he said.

The court granted an amnesty to five fugitives, and found six defendants who appeared in court not guilty. Charges against one former official were dropped after he died in jail.

tankers in the Gulf, regional shipping sources said on Sunday.

They said Iranian gunboats used either a new weapon or fired a new kind of incendiary projectile from weapons already in use to spark the spectacular fires which enveloped two tankers last week, sinking one.

"In the past, projectiles fired by the Iranians caused only small holes in the ships and small fires which the crew on board could extinguish, usually with no help from firefighting tugs," said a shipping agent.

Whatever hit the Norman Atlantic and the Pivot caused devastating fires," he added.

"We suspect a new projectile, some kind of incendiary with phosphorus perhaps, which turns the ships into torches.' A huge blaze on the 232,164-tonne Cypriot supertanker Pivot, following an Iranian attack on Saturday, forced most of the 44member crew to abandon ship. It took four firefighting tugs several hours to contain the fire.

Political sources said the opposition was also likely to seek changes to the complex electoral system, partly devised by Mr. Ozal's party, which prevented four parties from taking seats. Main opposition leader Erdal

Inonu fired an early salvo by Mr. Ozal, enjoying the longest saying government moves such as unbroken spell of premiership since 1960, sees closer EC links as price rises of up to 100 per cent announced since the poll to curb the budget deficit could lead to "social explosions and revolts." Mr. Inonu's Social Democrat

Populist Party (SHP) has 99 seats, compared with 54 to the Motherland's 249 in the old 400seat chamber. The centre-right True Path Party (TPP) increased its representation to 59 from 45.

Panel to evaluate role of social development centres

Highness Princess Basma, chairman of the board of trustees of the Queen Alia Jordan Social Welfare Fund (QAJSWF) today inaugurates a three-day symposium on evaluating social development centres in Jordan.

The symposium, organised by the QAJSWF in cooperation with the West German Organisation Konrad Adenauer, aims at briefing participants on the programmes and services provided by social development centres throughout the Kingdom and at assessing public contributions to

The symposium also aims to shed light on the ability of the centres to mobilise local leadership and encourage people to contribute to development programmes, in addition to studying the problems and obstacles facing

The meeting will also address the needs of local communities,

AMMAN (Petra) — Her Royal so that future programmes can be designed to improve the performance of these centres and to ensure coordination among them within the framework of the current social and economic development plan.

> The symposium will discuss three working papers prepared by social development experts on the outcome of a field study which covered 31 centres throughout the Kingdom. The study was intended to evaluate and to develop the future outlook of their role.

Taking part in the symposium are 50 participants representing various ministries and universities, as well as directors of social development departments. Also participating are representatives of the General Union of Voluntary Societies (GUVS), the Urban Development Department (UDD) and a number of specialised charitable societies.

RJ reviews past performance, future plans on eve of anniversary

By a Jordan Times Staff Reporter

AMMAN — Royal Jordanian (RJ), the Kingdom's national carrier and ambassador of goodwill around the world, celebrates its 24th anniversary on Tuesday.

From a nucleus of propellerdriven dart Heralds and a DC 7, RJ has grown over the past two decades to become an international company serving 42 cities around the world with its fleet of 19 modern aircraft.

Today, on the eve of the airline's celebration day, Ali Ghan-dour, chairman of the RJ board and chief executive officer, will outline the company's present performance and future schemes to a large group of local and foreign journalists.

In his press conference, Mr. Ghandour, an aeronautical engineer, will also review the company's 1987 financial report, including the operating and non-operating profit, in addition to figures on RJ's total traffic performance, cargo handling, load factor, employee productivity and mail and excess baggage.

Based on the results of the first seven months, RJ officials forecast a net profit of JD 4 million, excluding foreign exchange profits and losses.

Reports on the company published recently by the Jordan Times quoted officials as saying that part of the profit would proceed from the sale to British Caledonian of one of the airline's two Boeing 747s. The remainder would derive from operating pro-fit, projected at JD 1.3 million this year, and non-operating pro-fit, mainly from handling services to foreign airlines flying to

Royal Jordanian, which changed its name from Alia last December, took a net loss of JD 1.78 million, company figures

Passenger traffic rose slightly to 653,724 in the period January to July from 647,493 in the same period of 1986, while the seat factor rose to 6.3 per cent from 55.8, and load factor 4.4 per cent to 50.6 per cent. Passenger traffic

It currently has one Boeing 747, eight Lockheed TriStars, and two A government of Oman (36 per 310 airbuses. The two airbuses cent). are part of six similar aircraft due to be delivered to the company by 1990. One of the remaining four airbuses is expected to arrive in 1988; two others in 1989; and the last one in 1990. With offices in 100 capitals throughout the world, RJ's new routes for 1988 are expected to include Montreal, New Delhi and Calcutta and possibly Rio de Janeiro via Africa.

Other destinations might include Manila and Jakarta, and extensions to Australia and Japan are under consideration. On the occasion of the RJ's 24th anniversary, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, made a special report covering the company's history and development and assessing its role in supporting Jordan's economy, tourism pany and culture.

According to Petra, "RJ annually carries a total of two million passengers on board its aircraft and is making profits despite the difficult conditions currently prevailing in the worldwide airline transport industry."

Reviewing RJ's development, Petra said "one finds that the company is not merely an airline establishment. Rather, it is a symbol of national independence, in addition to its role in supporting the economy and serving as a bridge to link the Kingdom with the rest of the world."

The company's establishment in 1963 was an important turning point in the Kingdom's history of aviation, as it crowned 17 years of previous efforts to set up such an enterprise. Attempts to form the company started in 1946, and after a shaky period, the company was formed in 1963.

Symposium to discuss drug production and quality control

AMMAN (Petra) - A four-day symposium organised by the Árab Federation of Producers of Drugs and Medical Appliances begins today.

Dr. Subhi Tibi, member of the federation's board of directors told the Jordan News Agency. Petra, that the symposium will focus on a number of working papers on the objectives of the federation and the pharmaceuticals industry in Jordan and the Arab World as a whole. Dr. Tibi said that participants in the meeting will discuss, specifically, drug conrol, packaging and storage according to the criteria followed by drug producers in Switzerland

Dr. Tibi noted that the symposium's recommendations will be presented to the Council of Arab Health Ministers for approval and the U.S.

Taking part in the symposium are 128 participants, representing 12 Arab countries, in addition to experts from the World Health Organisation (WHO), the United Nations Industrial Development Organisation (UNIDO), the Swiss-based Drug Control Office, the Food and Drug Administration in the U.S. and a number of specialists from pan-Arab and regional organisations.

Conference tackles formation of new specialised Arab philosophy

By Nermeen Murad Special to the Jordan Times

AMMAN — Arab philosophers met here on Sunday for the first session of a three-day conference tackling philosophical issues, 20th century schools of philosophy and the formation of an Arab philosophical society.

The Second Arab Conference on Philosophy was opened by Senator Akram Zu'aitar, deputising for His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan. In his opening address, Mr. Zu'aitar welcomed the Arab philosophers to Jordan, "the country in which roads meet and do not part, and in which thinkers discuss and do not argue even if they differ."

Prince Hassan said that the strategic position of Jordan has ingrained in our souls, over the years, the belief in the relativity of knowledge and the integration of reality and taught us that centrism, or the middle ground, joins in its essence the important part of each side, leaving to extremism

The Crown Prince pointed out that in Arab-Islamic society "a belief in the limitation of abilities of an individual or a united nation or one age has spread. Our philosophers have insisted that reality in any field is not absolute; rather, it comes together over the ages, not through one individual but through the efforts of many people; not through the endeavours of one nation but through the united efforts of many nations.

Thus, he added, philosophers agreed that reality or truth will not come from one line of thought and that differences in opinion are a "godly blessing." Through these convictions, philosophers rid themselves of "narrow-minded sectarianism or fanaticism" and, instead, adopted different theories, and the endeavour of scientific discussion began.

Hence, "comments and counter-comments" were an indirect written dialogue between scholars and philosophers throughout the ages, the Crown Prince said. The Islamic caliphs and princes took good care of scientists and philosophers, paying tribute to the services they render to the

Today, the Crown Prince said, the Arab questions whether the thoughts and activities of the contemporary Arab intelligentsia stem from the reality of the society at large and the outlook of their nation, or if they follow a certain curriculum of thought or a line of thinking arrived at through comprehensive research, or whether their curricula stem from the research of other societies, based on thoughts and aspirations other than our own hopes and aims." "To what extent do our philosophers understand their science and to what extent is there a rational debate among them?" Prince Hassan asked. The Crown Prince concluded his speech by pointing out that "the eyes of the intellectuals of our nation are currently pivoting on this conference and are awaiting its debates, discussions and recommendations. I hope that you will not fail them," he said to the philosophers gathered at the conference. University of Jordan President

Abdul Salam Al Majali also welcomed the participants, saying that "the problems facing the world today — some which threaten culture and humanity and others which arouse in the human soul anxiety and fear make it imperative for philosophers, doctors and intellectuals to direct the results of our science towards eliminating the causes of danger." He stressed that this would not be achieved except by understanding the relationship between science and reality and through constructive research into ideas and aims.

Dr. Majali also told Arab philosophers that they must be aware of recurrent attempts by certain Western intellectuals to create doubts over the authenticity of Islamic and Arab philosophy. He said this was an indication of their denial of the abilities of the Arab mind to excel and invent; therefore, he added, Jordan.

Arab philosophers should, through this conference, find and establish a separate, specialised Arab philosophy, carrying its own individual personality, with a solid basis which stem from the reality of our sociology, psychology and ideologies.

"This philosophy should join past with present and should be an image of the beliefs of our nation, its history, aspirations and its reality." Dr. Majali said, adding that only through a new authentic Arab philosophy could philosophers endeavour to "build the new Arab mind and the new

But, Dr. Majali emphasised that building a new Arab philosophy should not divert Arab society from being a part of the phi-losophy which deals with current issues and thoughts, and that we should walk hand in hand with all that is new in this science. He said that we should not let a chance to learn and exchange ideas bypass us, so we do not fall into the pit of fanaticism nor stand still while the world around us is moving.

. At the beginning of the conference, the vice-dean of the Faculty of Arts at the University of Jordan and president of the preparatory committee for the conference, Ahmad Madi, gave a general introduction to the conference, pointing out that it was considered to be the first united effort between the University of Jordan and the Arab Unity Research Centre. He expressed hope that this type of cooperation would continue to contribute to the growth of the Arab cultural

Dr. Madi also called for the establishment of a society for Arab philosophers, which would work towards uniting their efforts. The society would hold specialised meetings and conferences to study and solve current Arab and Islamic philosophical problems, as well as publish a magazine aimed at spreading philosophical thought, particularly the study of reality in the Arab Nation.

Attending the opening session on Sunday were Minister of Plan-ning Dr. Taher Kanaan and a number of government officials, in addition to deans and professors from the University of

The Palestine Press Service listed names, ages and injuries of 27 Arabs who were treated in Shifa hospital after being hurt in demonstrations in Gaza. It said 17 Palestinians were injured by army gunfire, most in the hands or feet, and six others had been beaten by soldiers.

Shifa officials said three were in serious condition and had been transferred to other hospitals.

Hugh Schofield, a reporter for BBC radio, said he saw about 30 soldiers break into the Shifa hospital compound in Gaza City and beat Arabs who were throwing stones. He said one soldier fired rubber pellets inside the hospital's main building.

In the West Bank town of Hebron, two Palestinian students were injured. Israel Radio said Arab protesters threw stones at an Israeli bus carrying a number of soldiers, three of whom were injured by flying glass. The soldiers chased the stone-throwers and two Arabs were shot.

Army spokesman said five Arabs were wounded, four in Gaza and one in Hebron. An Israeli soundman working for a foreign TV network was hospitalised with facial injuries after being stoned in Gaza.

Commercial strikes were reported in the West Bank towns of Ramallah and Nablus. Soldiers lifted and then reimposed a curfew on the Balata refugee camp near Nablus, where four Arabs were killed, including two 11year-old boys, on Friday.

Palestinian sources said nearly all shopkeepers closed their stores in Gaza, Nablus and

Straining against the shackles

BY all counts, published and unpublished, what is going on in the Israeli-occupied territories, particularly in Gaza, cannot be considered as one of the regular, slight spasms in the Palestinian struggle against Israel. While a resounding reminder of the fact that the Palestinians are no longer afraid of Israeli bullets, the violent demonstrations in the occupied lands also show that the situation has grown into head-on clash; and, given the right momentum, it could explode into something that no occupying power could ever hope to quell. Time and time again, the occupation forces have rejected all moves towards peace, adding fuel to Palestinian frustration and anger. At the same time, the Palestinians have received very little practical help from the outside. Living under circumstances too bearable for most to endure and seeing that little hope is offered from outside, the Palestinians appear to have realised and accepted that the solution to their problem must be initiated from within their own ranks, and that the first step towards that end is to make the territories ungovernable for the Israelis. To them, demonstrations, strikes or the throwing of a single stone, are better than waiting for a solution which may never materialise. Their acts of demonstrations and violent protest move them along the way to making the occupied territories a botbed, that could prove to be the spark which ignites in Israel's face.

Despite the censorship applied in the occupied territories, it is apparent that the real battle is the battle of the people. The iron is hot, now, and it is time for the Arabs to use this opportunity to apply pressure through all means available. Diplomatic leverage must be used. Support — moral and financial - must be extended to our Palestinian brothers and sisters to maintain their steadfastness. Moreover, it is the responsibility of the Arab countries to assist the Palestinians in stepping up the momentum of their active struggle.

We salute the Palestinians for their recent efforts in resisting the Israeli oppressor and hope that these episodes continue to prove that the Palestinians possess the power to ignite the spark of their liberation.

Al Ra'i: King campaigns for Arab solidarity

KING Hussein on Saturday continued his moves on the pan-Arab front by embarking on a tour of Arab Gulf states for talks with their leaders on ways of enhancing the outcome and the resolutions of the Amman summit. The talks with the Arab leaders cover the situation in the Gulf which was tackled by the summit held here last month, and which succeeded in bringing about agreement and consensus among Arab states on various important issues confronting them at present. The current tour is designed to corroborate the resolutions taken at the summit and enhance the drive towards safeguarding Arab security and protecting Arab homeland from external aggression. The implementation of the Amman summit resolutions would be a translation of the will of Arab leaders into practice, something which would no doubt gain more credibility for the Arabs in the international arena. King Hussein's current tour is taking into consideration the time element which is crucial in the present circumstances, and calls for speedy action on the pan-Arab front. The Arabs cannot take the initiative in resolving their problems unless they are united and agreed on the steps that should be taken in the coming stage; and unless they have the determination and will to unite they can never achieve their objectives. The King's current endeavours represent a period in which Arab resolutions are being translated into action, and there is no doubt that the monarch's moves are aimed at fulfilling the aspirations of the Arab masses.

Al Dustour: King follows on summit resolutions

KING Hussein's tour of Gulf Arab states comes in the wake of a successful Arab summit in Amman during which the King was instrumental in bringing about consensus and agreement among the Arabs on basic issues of concern to their countries. The King's visits to Gulf countries constitute an important stage in his on-going efforts, to rally the Arabs, and is part of a long series of endeavours which started in Damascus, and was followed by visits to Baghdad, Saudi Arabia, and Egypt. One can see that this tour coincides with serious developments in our region and comes at a time when the Arab states are in need of unity and joint action. The visit to the Gulf comes against a background of serious escalations in the Gulf conflict and at a time when Iran threatens to launch a new offensive against Iraq and possibly against Arab states in the Gulf region. One can say that this tour is also part of the King's efforts to corroborate the resolutions of the Amman summit and enhance the brotherly atmosphere which prevailed at the meeting in Amman. We hope that the Gulf states will respond to these efforts by embarking on a more effective role to boost the joint Arab action at this crucial stage, and we sincerely hope that the King's tour will achieve its aspired goals.

Sawt Al Shaab: U.S.. Israel stand against

ISRAEL and its ally the United States continue to reject the only chance for peace in the Middle East as was manifest in their voting against a resolution for holding an international conference taken at the United Nations General Assembly. Israel's rejection of the idea of the conference and the U.S. support for Israel's stand have had their negative impact on the European nations which chose to refrain from voting on the motion at the U.N. General Assembly meeting. The Europeans have been welcoming the idea of the conference as was clear in their Brussels declaration but under U.N.-Israeli pressure they succumbed and turned their back to the Arabs. Such European stand can only encourage Israel and the United States to block all paths leading to a settlement. But the U.N. General Assembly's vote which was 134 for the idea of the conference can and should be regarded as a victory for Jordan's diplomacy and for the Arab struggle for the achievement of a just and permanent peace. I this year, had seemed even more

Fuses running short in occupied territories

By Waleed Sadi

THE ON-GOING uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip is a sample of the catastrophe that lies ahead which Lord Winchilsea, the head of the fact-finding British delegation which concluded its visit to the occupied territories on the eve of the Reagan-Gorbachev summit, has predicted. The upheaval in the West Bank and Gaza Strip is also a warning that Palestinian resistance is on the rise as long as Israeli occupation persists. The Black December week in which at least eight Palestinian Arabs were shot to death and dozens injured by Israeli troops attempting to disperse Palestinian demonstrations could very well go down in the Middle East history as the watershed which will determine the future course of events in the occupied territories.

Lord Winchilsea and his accompanying delegation have warned of an "imminent human catastrophe" in the occupied territories. To quote but some of his words expressing this gloomy forecast, Lord Winchilsea said: "There is a new and immediate danger of a human catastrophe leading to the death of thousands of innocent people... and a rapid slide towards an uncontrolable and violent confrontation between the unarmed inhabitants of the occupied territories and the Israeli occupation troops." He incorporated such admonitions in the report that he forwarded to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on the eve of her meeting with Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev who was en route to Washington for his summit with President Ronald Reagan. And judging by the results of the Reagan-Gorbachev summit, the warning of Lord Winchilsea and like minded well informed people has failed to make a dent in the U.S. opposition to the principle of holding an international peace conference on the Middle East. The Arab-Israeli conflict ended up being one of the principal sour points on which the two leaders could not agree. That means that the Arabs must wait a lot longer for a breakthrough in their quest for an honourable and durable peace in the Middle East. To be sure, such a breakthrough is not likely to occur prior to the Israeli and U.S. elections late next year, albeit, the projections about the outcome of these elections do not look promising as far as peace in the region is concerned.

On the Arab side, it would help a great deal if the Arab house is put in a better order; for inspite of the unprecedented solidarity achieved between the Arab leaders at last month's summit, there is still a great deal to be done. The Arab inhabitants of the occupied territories are still waiting for clearer signals from the Arab World about the future course of events. They are no longer content with pious remarks about the international peace conference. They are demanding immediate, more action-oriented steps, as their recent uprising most clearly demonstrates. Their patience with the Israelis and the Arab World is obviously wearing thin.

As for the Israeli side of the equation, the Israelis will be well advised to heed the words of their Foreign Minister Shimon Peres who summed up the Arab-Israeli situation well when he told some right-wing parliamentarians in the wake of the stabbing to death of an Israeli settler in Gaza City last week that the Israelis must reckon with reality and choose between giving up 300 square kilometres of the Gaza Strip or 650,000 hostile Palestinians projected to become one million at the turn of the century that come with it. The tra logic and rationale of this can and should be extended to the Wes Bank as well where 750,000 Palestinian Arabs still live and whos number is also expected to swell to one million by the year 2000_ mere 12 years away. And although Mr. Peres and like-minde Israelis have started to comprehend the time-bomb awaiting the country if their occupation of Arab territories continues more longer, we in the Arab World have been voicing such concerns: long time ago. The clear Arab message to the Israelis has been a along to choose between peace and territory. In other words the Israelis cannot have their cake and eat it. Yet Arab warnings fell a deaf ears in Israel and elsewhere especially in Washington. The U.S. leverage with the Israelis and in particular with the Like leadership has yet to be tapped in favour of permanent peace in the Middle East. But we in the Arab World understand fully the Charles Percy syndrome — the U.S. Senator who lost power and prestige because of his balanced views on the Arab-Israel conflict. Its lessons obviously hang heavily on the minds and consciences of many U.S. men and women seeking positions of power and glory with their political system. That's why am breakthrough in the Arab-Israeli conflict must be sought from within the Arab and Israeli constituencies themselves. Alas neithe side has done its home work on solid grounds yet.

West Bank, Gaza uprising highlights human time bomb

By Paul Taylor

TEL AVTV — Children are in the front line of Palestinian uprising sweeping the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, highlighting a human time bomb ticking on Israel's doorstep.

Demonstrators who stoned Israeli troops, hurled petrol bombs, barricaded streets and burnt tyres over the last week had an average age of about 15.

Five of the six protesters shot dead by the Israeli army since last Wednesday were teenagers. The youngest was an 11-year-old boy.

"They are the children of the occupation, born under Israeli

'What is frightening is that they are simply not afraid any more," he said.

The uprising has been most severe in the squalid refugee camps, where impoverished families have little to lose.

Few Israeli civilians now dare venture into the teeming coastal strip. Even the 3,000 hardened Jewish settlers, who live behind forests of barbed wire on 30 per cent of Gaza's scarce land, travel only armed and in convoys.

The daily Hadashot, in a comparison heard increasingly frequently among Israelis, said in an editorial: "Since 1967, the Gaza rule," said Bernard Mills, direc- Strip and parts of (the West tor of the U.N. Relief and Works Bank) have become more and

It said the areas were "densely populated, poor, with shameful living conditions and full of

"It is no secret that Israeli soldiers are scared today to enter those areas," Hadashot said.

The scale and ferocity of the latest wave of demonstrations surprised Israeli politicians and editors. Military commanders went on state radio to try to reassure the public that the army was in control.

Israeli and Palestinian editors agreed the demonstrations began spontaneously in Gaza after four Arab workers were killed by an Israeli army truck last Tuesday. Yehuda Litani, in an analysis in the Jerusalem Post, said the youthful protesters were emboldened by the success of a Palestinian fighter who killed six Israeli soldiers in a hang-glider raid on northern Israel on November 25.

Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO) leaders encouraged the demonstrators in an effort to draw the Palestinian problem to the attention of President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev at their Washington summit, Litani

But foreign relief workers said the demonstrators needed no outside incitement.

Those who know Shultz say the treaty was a tribute to his quiet persistence - which helped him outlast a cast of Pentagon critics.

Missing at last week's lunch was Caspar Weinberger, who quit as defence secretary last month after years of suspicion of the wisdom of signing any arms treaties with Moscow.

Nor was there Richard Perle, who, until his resignation as assistant secretary of defence earlier opposed to the INF treaty than while the Pentagon was trying to Weinberger.

MANILA — Warships, troops and bulletproof cars will shield non-Communist Asian leaders meeting in the strife-torn Philippines this week in their first summit in a decade.

Fears for their safety are dominating the run-up to the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) talks in Manila and threaten to draw the spotlight away from their discussions of politics and economics.

The unprecedented protection follows a wave of bomb incidents apparently orchestrated by rightwing enemies of Philippine President Corazon Aquino to disrupt the summit. Police have described the ex-

A financial famine

THE NET flow of finance in the world is now heavily from the poor countries to the rich, according to a new report from the United Nations Children's Fund, UNICEF, Balancing all new aid and loans against the flow back of debt and interest payments, the "bottom line" is that approximately $27 billion a year is now flowing from the developing nations to the industrialised world. In 1981, the net flow was over $40 billion a year — in the opposite direction. And this dramatic about-face has happened, says UNICEF, at a time when prices for the developing world's raw materials are at their lowest for fifty years.

The result, says UNICEF's State of the World's Children report for 1988, is a financial

Children's recession

Not all nations have suffered equally. Several of the most populous countries of Asia, including India and China, have been able to insulate themselves from the worst of the recession. But in the 1980s, more than 70 governments, mainly in Africa and Latin America, have had to implement "adjustment policies" to reduce balance-of-payments deficits, honour debt repayments, and try to get stalled economies

Young children have suffered most. "They are the ones whose families have least scope for making economies and have had to cut back on necessities," says the UNICEF report, "and they are the ones who are most dependent on the health services and food subsidies which so many governments have cut back as a way of adjusting to recession."

As a result, clinics are being closed, teachers are being laid off, and malnutrition is on the increase in many nations. UN-ICEF studies show that "the wellbeing of the young has been measurably deteriorating in at least thirty nations of the developing world."

"But sacrificing the growth of today's children for the growth of tomorrow's economy," com-ments UNICEF's Executive Director, James P. Grant, "makes neither economic sense nor human sense.'

"It cannot be stressed too often," continues Grant, "that the young child cannot just 'ride out' such periods of austerity. A child who has to go without adequate food or health care in those years will not grow to his or her physical or mental potential. There is no second chance."

The alternatives

The UNICEF report also examines practical alternatives to present adjustment policies. Arguing that low-cost services for the majority — such as immunisation and other primary health care programmes - should be maintained at all costs, the report argues that such services can be afforded even in difficult economic times.

"It is not a question of inevitabilities but of priorities," says Grant. "Even if a government has to make spending cuts, there is a choice about exactly where those cuts should be made. In defence or in the health of its people? In subsidies to airlines serving the richest 2 per cent or to food programmes serving the poorest 20 per cent? And even if spending on health and education does have to take its share of the financial strain, there remains a choice about whether to cut the budgets of universities or primary schools, city hospitals or rural health clinics, cardiac research or child immunisation programmes."

In particular, most developing nations could take advantage of today's major opportunities for promoting child health by lowcost means — and especially by informing and supporting parents in applying today's knowledge about such basic health actions as immunisation, oral re-hydration therapy, birth spacing, breastfeeding, safe weaning, growth monitoring, control of respiratory infections, safe motherhood, and basic home hygiene. "These are the areas of action which could cut child deaths and child malnutrition by half, says UNICEF, "and these are the areas where action is possible at such low cost that it can be afforded by almost any nation and by almost any family even in such difficult economic times."

"Most of the growth of a human brain and body is completed in the first five years of life. There is no second chance. Children who have to go without adequate food or health care in those years will be unable to develop to their full potential today — and unable to make their full contribution to society tomorrow." — the 1988 State of the World's Children report from UNICEF (Photograph by Mike Goldwater/

Some nations are attempting to protect the poorest from the worst effects of recession. Finally, the report suggests that protecting young children in hard monitored and measured.

"Most nations produce quarterly statistics on the health of their economies" says Grant, "but few nations can produce even annual statistics on the health of their children."

Three years after great drought, hunger again sweeps Africa

By Rory Channing

NAIROBI — Only three years after Africa's great drought, rains have failed again and hunger once more stalks the world's poorest continent.

Villagers trek for days in Ethiopia to get foreign food handouts and children are already dying of diseases brought on by malnutrition, relief officials

There and elsewhere the land-scape is devastated. Cattle have died, crops withered and rivers dried up. Relief workers are battling to stop the ranks of refugees

Irish pop star Bob Geldof, of Band Aid and Live Aid fame, is trying again to focus world attention on Ethiopia where five million people face starvation, and war-torn Mozambique where malnutrition and infant mortality rates are among the world's highest. But fears that Ethiopia's plight might not evoke the public concern shown in 1985 raise a question over how 18 other African nations facing food shortages might fare.

*Compassion fatigue is seting in," said Zia Rizvi, secretary-general of the Geneva-based Independent Commission on International Humanitarian Issues.

"The second crisis has already started and it comes at a time when people are already sick of listening to horror stories in Ethiopia," he said last week. Up to one million Ethiopians died in the 1984-85 famine, according to estimates of the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF). Relief agencies have identified 18 other African countries in need of food because of crop failure resulting from drought, locusts and war. Starting with Mauritania in the West the drought belt, shaped like a question mark, stretches east across the continent to

Somalia then bends south to Swaziland. It sweeps through Mali, Burkina Faso, Niger, Nigeria, Chad, Sudan, Ethiopia, Uganda, Zaire, Tanzania, Zaibahara, Malaki, Angola, Zimbabwe, Mozambique and Botswana, gripped by drought for the sixth year in a

The Rome-based World Food Programme (WFP) said last month that 15 sub-Saharan countries needed 2.7 million tonnes of relief food. Foreign donors had then pledged only 1.3 million.

A World Bank report for the year ended June 30 and published in September gave no hint of the problems then already looming in Eastern and Southern Africa.

"The end of the severe drought in most countries was followed by such a surge in food production that food shortages have become the exception rather than the rule," it observed.

Last month the WFP said conditions in sub-Saharan Africa had deteriorated so rapidly and unexpectedly that it was running short f emergency food stocks. The lesson of the last drought — the need to improve warning systems and build adequate food reserves - had yet to bear fruit.

Foreign governments have responded quickly to appeals for aid, sending money, food, medicine and, in Ethiopia's case, trucks and planes to distribute the

"What do you mean?" I asked. "Traffic lights are installed in order to protect people, not to cause accidents."

"Well," he told me with a smirk. "That is true in theory, but the practice is quite different around here. Follow me and I will

I followed him, and the result was stunning. In several locations in Amman, the light for the pedestrians turns green at the same time the light for the cars coming from side streets turns green. If, trusting the lights, people cross the street without looking, there is a good chance they will get hit.

I have an example which you can check for yourself.

Coming from a side street in Shmeisani, at the crossroad near the Wahbi Tamari school, when the light turns green for cars turning right towards the Wadi Sagra intersection, the moment you join the main road, the pedestrian light also turns green for you join the main road, the pedestrian light also this green for people crossing towards the school.

The situation is extremely dangerous, as pedestrians see that traffic on the main road is stationary and, therefore, do not imagine that other cars will emerge from the side street.

This is just one example. It is vital that the Traffic Department addresses the problem immediately because it is a matter of safety as well as traffic regulations.

Secrets of soil fertility

By Alexander Batalin

Man has invented numerous ways of influencing Nature to get more food. However, even on the bountiful Iowa experimental farms soil fertility is reaching its limit for all the updated agronomy. Can productivity grow any further? Rurik Salyaev, Corresponding Member of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR, head of the Irkutsk Institute of Plant Physiology and Biochemistry in Siberia, speaks about this with Novosti correspondent:

"OUR INSTITUTE is tackling this problem. We described our approach to it and our results at this year's conference of the Federation of European Biochemical Societies in Yugoslavia and at the Spanish-Soviet symposium. We believe that revolutionary intervention in plant physiology can bring about a substantial rise in productivity.'

Disclosed and undisclosed secrets

Imagine a leaf section several ten millionths of a millimeter thick. Incredible as it is, that is the membrane thickness which is vital for plant processes. In plant cells they accumulate compounds which are needed as food, medicines and technical raw materials.

Membranology is a new branch of science. Rurik Salyaev and his colleagues were the first ones in the Soviet Union to undertake fundamental study of membrane biogenesis on isolated, "bare" plant protoplasm. The complex technology of the production of pure membrane fractions and their study with the use of supersensitive instruments and electron-vacuum microscopes has been mastered. Many scientists come to Irkutsk to study these ment. The Soviet experience is touched upon in a French-published study paper, a part of which was written by Rurik

"The first phase of research study of the object, its properties and functions from its basic parameters — is over," he says. We're entering a new phase study of membranes as transportation means which ensure movement of different substances Simultaneously, the synthesis of in the cell and their storage. We're looking for methods to control accumulation of the substances we need and thereby to influence the yield at the cellular

"Another method of raising vields at the molecular level is designing plants by means of gene engineering. So far we have been tackling fundamental tasks and selecting and developing the vectors and conditions for controlled cell fusion in hybridisation, and also the conditions in which to recreate a plant from the hybridised cells.

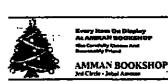

"In principle it is no longer problematic to grow a plant from a cell. But not every plant lends itself to such experimenting. For research methods and equip- example, carrot, potato, tomato and tobacco cells easily regenerate, while wheat cells don't. We don't know the secret yet."

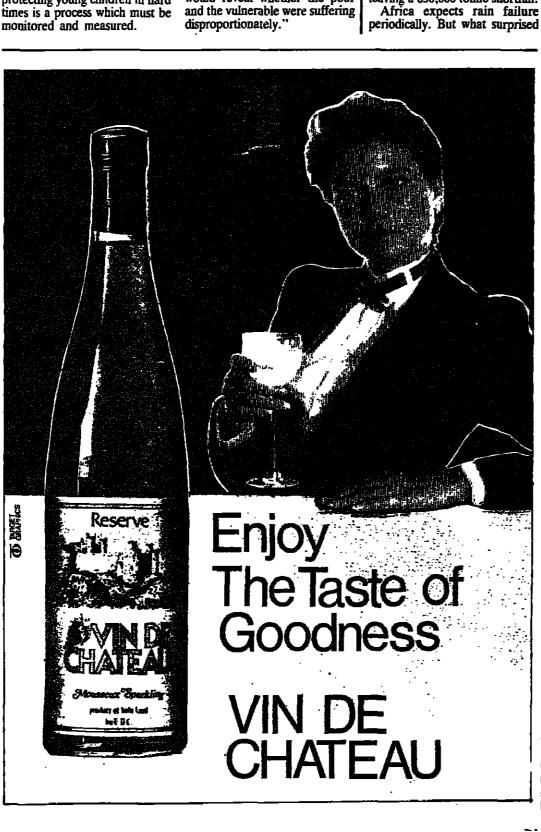

The Institute's Biochemical Genetics Laboratory is probing them. Victor Voinikov, Doctor of Biology, has put forward an in-teresting "cold shock" theory. It boils down to the following: When the temperature falls, the synthesis of ordinary proteins slows down, or ends altogether.

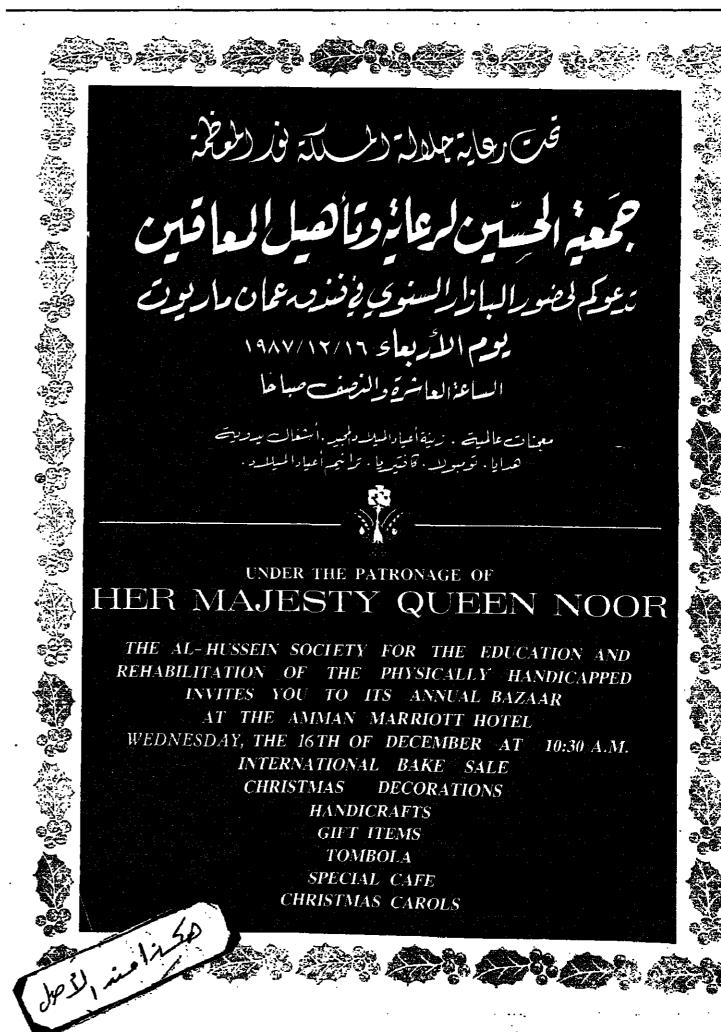

other unusual proteins begins. In Voinikov's opinion, they help the plant to survive in these unfavourable conditions.

For genetic experiments the scientists use hybrids of winter wheat and rye, which are promising economically. Their adaptation to the rigorous Siberian climate is the Institute's goal. Research follows a routine path: Selection of the genotypes by tests and tough testing of them against a so-called "provocative background". The most resistant genotypes are selected for further work. The ultimate goal is production of genotypes that would be donors of frost-resistant genes.

Towards this end gene-engineering methods are employed. From the frost-resistant cell this genetic material is transplanted. by microsurgery, into another cell with other very useful properties. The hybrid cell produced has to be multiplied and then entire plants grown from them.

Opportunist goals from veteran to get the ball in front of him." striker Fernando Gomes and Algerian World Cup star Rabah Madjer edged out the powerful and patient Uruguayans after the teams were level 1-1 at the end of 90 minutes. Madjer's brilliantlytaken winner came in the 18th minute of extra time.

Porto coach Tomislav Ivic said he had never before been involved in a game played under such conditions. "If this had been any other game, it would have been postponed." he said before both teams flew out to fulfil domestic commitments.

Both sides worked hard to overcome the problems posed by heavy snow on a poor surface which dissolved into a mudbath. The ball stopped dead as soon as it hit the ground and the players floundered in ankle-deep mud which would have been ruled unfit for the lowliest of amateur soccer matches.

Penarol coach Oscar Tabarez said his team's tactics were simply to "kick the ball as hard as possible" while Ivic added: "It was an achievement for a player

He was constantly in action as Penarol, prompted by Ricardo Viera, pressed forward and his bravery in dealing with through balls mired in the mud on the six-metre line foiled the everdangerous Diego Aguirre on three occasions.

But he was unable to do anything about Viera's equaliser in the 80th minute. The tall, powerful midfielder controlled the ball on his chest, turned on the sixmetre line and drove a crisp shot beyond the keeper's reach.

The goal appeared to rattle Porto but Penarol, playing the more composed version of kickand-rush, were unable to press home their advantage before in the end of normal time.

They continued to attack but paid the price when Madjer, the only Porto player in Penarol's half, chased a long clearance and won it from a defender who was bogged down some 35 metres

Soviets increase oil exports

MOSCOW (R) - The Soviet Union said last week it managed a slight increase during 1986 in the volume of its petroleum exports, its chief source of hard currency.

Breaking with previous policy in line with the Kremlin's drive for openness, it published export volume figures for oil, gas, grain and other commodities. It used to report only the value of these in τοubles.

The official monthly Foreign Trade said Soviet exports of oil and petroleum products reached 186.3 million tonnes in 1986, up from 166.9 million tonnes the previous year.

It said the Soviet Union exported 79.2 billion cubic metres of fuel gas last year compared to 68.7 billion in 1985.

Although the Soviet Union imports grain from the West, it also exported 26.8 million tonnes of grain (excluding groats) in 1986, down from exports of 44.2 million tonnes in 1985. Foreign Trade did not specify the importing countries. The figures were presented in a table comparing export by commodities in the years 1918, 1970,

Jose Reyes, deputy operations chief of the Manila rescue coordinating centre said PAL Flight 443 left Cebu airport at 6:45 a.m. (2245 GMT Saturday) with 11 passengers and four crew members bound for Digan City, some 240 kilometres to the south.

Airline officials said radio contact with the twin-engine SD-360 "Sunriser" was lost after pilot Roberto Sarenas radioed for a weather report at about 7:30 a.m. (2330 GMT Saturday), about 10 minutes before he was to have landed in the northern Mindanao

Officials said weather along the route was good, but the government's weather service said there were isolated thunderstorms in the Iligan area about the time the plane was to have landed.

Enrique Santos, PAL vice president for public relations, said air and ground search teams were sent to the area but called off the search at 5 p.m. (0900 GMT) because of darkness and bad weather. He said the search would resume at dawn Monday.

A passenger list released by the urline showed all those aboard had Filipino surnames except for one, a "John Richard Wood." The airline said it did not know Wood's nationality, but a Manila hotel where PAL said he had stayed told AP Wood registered as KLAGENFURT, Austria (R) -Police have arrested a 37-year-old Roman Catholic priest after discovering hashish worth around one million schillings ($85,000) in his parish church, a police spokesman said. Johann Wornig, parish priest in the small Carinthian village of St. Georgen am Weinberg, was arrested on suspicion of breaking Austria's drug laws. The spokesman in Klagenfurt, capital of the southern province of Carinthia, said Wornig admitted the offence but did not take the drug himself.

It did not take South long to realize that it would be fatal to cash the king of hearts because the opening lead had removed a key dummy entry. The campaign he adopted could not be improved upon. After winning the ace of diamonds, he cashed the king and queen of spades. Had both defenders followed, declarer would have cashed the king of hearts before drawing the last trump, and a heart ruff would then have set up that suit even if it divided 4-1. But when East showed out on the second trump, declarer fell back on his alternative line.

He cashed the ace of trumps, came to hand with the ace of clubs and drew the last trump. Next, he overtook the king of hearts with the ace and cashed the queen. Had both defenders followed, a ruff would have set up the suit while the king of clubs was there as an entry; and the suit would have been good had the jack dropped. But declarer was still in command when West showed out. He led the 10 for the marked ruffing finesse and whether or not East covered. the heart suit could be brought in

Priority should be given to gathering information on where the need is greatest and on developing family planning programmes in the poorest and most rapidly growing nations, says Ms. Jacobson.

In addition, developing countries need to make a greater contribution and commitment to family planning, she says, rather than spending excessive sums on military forces.

"The overpopulation, hunger and political unrest that are likely to result from continued high fertility pose far greater threats to national security than any outside aggressor. reported Ms.
